End the Secrecy around UK Drone Wars

Great secrecy surrounds the deployment and use of Britain's armed drones. While the UK is happy to detail the number of piloted aircraft deployed on operations, the government refuses to say how many of its fleet of armed Reaper drones are deployed or where they are operating.

Armed drones are a dangerous new technology, lowering the threshold for war, increasing the risk to civilians and expanding the use of so-called targeted killing. It is vital that there is appropriate transparency and proper accountability over their deployment and use.

We call on UK government to end the secrecy surrounding the deployment of armed British Reaper drones, to release the number deployed and their location (as they do for other armed aircraft), and to release all necessary information for a proper public debate about the UK's deployment of armed drones.
